“ Mick worked as the cruise director but was an undercover Rockstar. Every now and then he would bring in some beautiful guitar and shred some new song he'd been working on. He was a true artist in many ways. Mick was a master graphic artist that designed the graphics and wrapped my promo van. His attention to detail was why he was my first call for so many random things. Be it a t-shirt design what's a good cigar, how much booz to order for my daughters graduation party or just calling him cause I know there's some new audio gear coming out and I knew he be excited to talk about it! There was this time I got on the princess boat ready to work and Mick pulled me to the side and told me there was a complaint about me from the week before that I worked a private party wearing basketball shorts and a jersey. Mick laughed cause I wasn't even the dj on the boat that day but every day for the next two years Mick teased me about my outfits. The Thursday before he passed he was making shirts for my daughter's volleyball team. We talked about music for over an hour. We were planning to start working on some studio collaborations but I guess those will have to wait. I am honored to have had so many memories with my friend Mick. I'll miss you Broham
