“ it has been 13 days since you left this world and i struggle with this more and more as the days become weeks and the weeks will become months and the months will become years . I am usually never at a loss for words but cant seem to string 2 words together to write this and struggle with the thought of having to .I am fine for a few hours and then i see the sun or a commercial or hear a song or just have a flashback of you as a wide eyed ,happy loving child who loved his lego's , little toy cars and grew up into a still wide eyed big kid in many ways and struggle to find the sense in any of this .We as humans experience grief in many ways over the course of our lifetime and there is no grief that is easier to overcome than others .You will always be my baby brother and the first person who really made me love someone more than myself .I remember the Christmas morning mom and ray brought you home from the hospital and how happy i was to have a little brother to play with and "boss around" The years went by and i had The boys and they had become my top priority but that never meant i didnt love you or still have that bond with you ,we went through so many things together as kids and i just wish i was able to have absorbed whatever pain and bad things you had to endure in this lifetime and let you have the peace you needed .Whether you knew and believed this or not , i would have fought any and everyone for you and just wish i could have been able to fight whatever caused you to feel you had to leave this earth . Although we disagreed on many things in life ,my love for you never ever waivered and never will . I will make sure everytime i see the sun rise and set or hear the birds chirp , feel the warmth of the sun or an image of you comes to mind (happens every waking moment and even wakes me from sleep) i will be sure to be thankful i was blessed to have you in my life and will be sure to remember you are at peace with mom, grandma and Jerry and have met the grandpa that nani always said you reminded her of in so many ways .Rest in peace my dear brother and please watch over all of us left here on this earth who love you now and will always .

Nick, may you rest in peace.. You might be gone from sight but you will never be gone from our hearts. You will be missed by many and although they might not be able to see you, they will feel your spirit watching over them and they will know that you are in God's hands
