“ Rick was just me of the nicest people on this earth. He always had time for me. I'd blow into town after one my many absences and we'd launch into car stuff like we were continuing a conversation we started. He was a much better mechanic, driver and technician than you first realized. Jack macCormack once me a Thunderbolt to put together. It was too much for me and Rick ended up with the car. He put his own motor that he built himself in that car and it flew. The stories..... On and on forever. Some of the best days of my life. Miss you buddy. See you soon.

First a hello to Tom, above. I worked, and raced with Rick over the course of many cars back in the mid-late '60s. Spent part of one night in the pits at Columbus trying to sleep tangled up in the roll cage on the back floor of the T-bolt Tom mentions above. The rest of the night was spent changing a blown head gasket on Jon's then new '68 CJ Mustang. By the next morning the Regional was postponed for rain and we all towed back to Detroit. GOOD TIMES. Rick, you're missed.

“ One of the fondest memories that we share of Rick is from our wedding. During the reception, after dinner, the DJ invited all married couples to join us on the dance floor.

Throughout the course of the song the DJ asked couples to depart the dance floor based upon the increments of time they were married beginning with one day, to one year, five years and so on.

As the dance floor opened up with couples returning to their seats, Rick and Loretta held each other close and remained as the last couple on the dance floor.

As the most recently wed, George and I were asked to join the reigning champs of nuptials. George took Loretta's hand and gave her a twirl into his arms and Rick wearing that big ol smile that we all know so well, took mine and we shared this beautiful moment. A moment we will forever hold close to our hearts.
