“ One of my favorite memories was when I called my Uncle Joe (although many of us affectionately referred to him as Zouzou) and told him that I decided on a whim to move to California; he was a traveler too, having visited many countries and states, and loved a good adventure. I asked him if he might be able to drive from the Detroit area to Kalamazoo to help me pack my moving truck the following weekend, expecting that he would probably not be able to make it on short notice. He came along with his brother Micho, and they spent hours trying to fit everything that I own in the tiny moving trailer that I was hauling across the country, packing it and then re-packing it to fit everything possible.

Zouzou would go out of his way to help anyone; he was such a kind, giving man. He was also a fierce protector, and so incredibly loyal to his family and friends.

Many of my friends got to know and love Zouzou through the moving process that I mentioned, but also different camping trips, road trips down south, and family barbecues. He was easy to talk to and lots of fun.

He was more than just an uncle to me, but a friend, and a father like figure. He will be missed dearly by my family and me, but we will treasure the beautiful memories made while he was here.

Rest in peace, Zouzou; you did beautiful things on your relatively short stay on earth. I hope that you enjoy heaven with Micho, your dad, and many other relatives that you talked fondly of over the years.

Sending lots of prayers to you, your kids, grandson, and the entire family.

We love you so much!!
