“Purple is now a special color and it will forever make me think of you Aunt Bonnie 💜.

I will miss so many things about you- putting me on the spot EVERY TIME you met someone who spoke Spanish saying “speak Spanish to him/her” you were persistent, everywhere, restaurants, out shopping even at home with grandpa jerry. You’d always say “my niece speaks Spanish- speak Spanish to them” lol

I will most of all miss your phone calls after any and every event in my life. The calls always started with... “soooooo how was it?” Then the questions would pour in and hours would go by. I loved it so much, thank you. It always made me feel like you cared about what was going on with me and mine. I will continue to share those special moments with you.

I love you.

“ On one of the many trips years ago when we used to drive down to Texas to visit grandma and grandpa, Aunt Bonnie had this song on repeat. She kept saying “one more time” and that eventually turned into at least 10 more plays. At the time I was probably annoyed but I grew to love this song. I’ll forever cherish this song and that memory. Rest easy.

“ When I was a kid, I would make this weird noise with my hand in a fist at my lips that sounded like doy doy doy. If you have seen it done you know what I’m talking about. It would make Aunt Bonnie laugh hysterically!! Every time I seen her I would do it and she would crack up!
